

NATO's 'avoidance' of civilian harm needs measuring

Original publication date
Tue, 11/03/2009 - 00:00

On 22 October NATO Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen posted a video message on his website in which he stated:

We take extra measures to avoid killing or injuring civilians. This approach has already shown results, civilian casualties are significantly down.

We argue that such claims cannot be evaluated, let alone sceptics convinced, until there is full and proper documentation of all casualties in conflicts involving NATO, published on a frequent and regular basis.

Read more in the attached pdf

- Research
- Responsibility to Protect

NATO_Watch_Briefing_Paper_No.3.pdf
View PDF